U.S. COMMITTEE FOR REFUGEES AND IMMIGRANTS ANNUAL REPORT

REFLECTIONS FROM 2016

BEYOND THE NUMBERS

ROOTED IN... HUMANITY

2016 was a challenging year for refugees and immigrants and for those of us who support them as they strive to establish their new lives and build new futures in America. We were heartened by the outpouring of support from unexpected places and people. It seemed that the louder the vitriol and hate became the more it was met by stronger individual and community support. This support was manifested in increased donations and more volunteers throughout the USCRI network. Unfortunately, our clients needed to be reassured that they were, indeed, safe in their new homes. We also told them that they were witnessing "...democracy in action..." which was not always pretty, not always inspiring, but had always turned out alright for the last 200 years.

This is a critical time of change for the issues that have mattered to us the most for the last 105 years. The need for political and community leadership, direct assistance to refugees and immigrants, and smart policy planning continues to increase globally while we fend off new distortions and confusion within the borders of the United States. At USCRI we have diversified our programming, strengthened local relationships, and promoted positive messaging for refugees and immigrants. Our national partnerships continue to grow enabling us to impact the narrative across the country. Because lives depend on it, we will continue to develop bipartisan solutions that confirm everyone, everywhere has equal value.
